SPEAKERS at the 2021 Annual Meeting

Royce Boyer (Musician) Royce@castlemedia.net “Paying for World War I with Music: The Victory Loan Tour”

ABSTRACT. The United States experienced a deficit of $4.5 billion following World War I, which ended in late 1919. A Victory Loan Committee was established to raise funds necessary to defeat the shortfall. On another front, a ceremonial band was formed in Europe at the request of General John Pershing, Commanding Officer, Allied Expeditionary Forces. It was subsequently requested to make a tour of selected U.S. cities to help raise the needed funds.

The presentation, including diary and newspaper accounts, will provide details of selected cities, some near where several Guild members reside today. It will also provide an introduction to an Episcopal musician, Lt. Philip James, an outstanding church organist and composer, who became the conductor of the A.E.F. Hqts. Band.

SPEAKER. Prof. D. Royce Boyer, a native of Indiana, received his post-public school education at Jordan Conservatory of Music/Butler Conservatory, B.M., The Catholic University of America, M.A., and the University of Texas at Austin, D.M.A. He initiated the music discipline at the new campus of the University of Alabama at Huntsville in 1966, where he was a faculty member for thirty-two years. Boyer continues to be active as a choir director. He was a church musician serving several denominations for nearly fifty years. Twenty-four of those years he was Choirmaster of the Church of the Nativity, Episcopal in Huntsville. His research interests have been exploring musical mysticism, various choral works, and the life of Philip James (1890-1960), composer, conductor, and educator.

NEWSLETTER OF THE GUILD OF SCHOLARS OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

John Wirenius (Attorney and Permanent Deacon) jwirenus@me.com / jwirenus@icloud.com

“The Establishment Experience: Lessons from the Anglo-Catholic Movements in the Church of England”

ABSTRACT: As political power shifts in the United States, some religious bodies seek to create partnerships with the federal government, assuming that such partnerships carry with them no risks to ecclesial independence and liberty. By its experience from the 1830s through to the present day, Anglicanism has shown that the price of ‘establishment’ is often government control over Christian political expression, doctrine, and even worship. The experience of Anglo-Catholics in the Church of England led both the conservative and liberal wings of the Church of England to agree on at least one thing: the profound dangers inherent in too close a relationship between Church and State. This paper will sketch some of that experience from the appearance of the Tracts for These Times through the 1920 Anglo-Catholic conference.

SPEAKER: John Wirenius graduated from Columbia Law School in 1990 (Harlan Fiske Stone Scholar), and from Fordham College in 1987, Summa cum laude, Hons. As a labor lawyer, he has published numerous scholarly articles on topics ranging from law and religion to freedom of speech and labor law. His publications include “The Ethics of Non-Lawyer Advocacy” in The International Comparative Policy and Ethics Law Review, 2 (2019), 777-801; “‘Command and Coercion:’ Clerical Immunity, Scandal, and the Sex Abuse Crisis in the Roman Catholic Church” in The Journal of Law and Religion, 27 (2011) 423-494. John is also the author of two books, Phineas at Bay (2014) and First Amendment, First Principles: Verbal Acts and Freedom of Speech 2000; Revised 2004). Most recently, he contributed to The Taylor Law at Fifty (2019).

Fred Smith (fsfasmith@gmail.com)

“Pessimistic Expectation, Wild Optimism: Discovering and Working Out My Anti-Racist Duty in Academia after the George Floyd Murder: Better Health of White Americans as Compared to That of Black and Other Minority Populations”

ABSTRACT: The explosion of the Black Lives Matter protests after George Floyd’s killing coincided with accelerating hospitalizations and deaths from Covid. By June, it was evident that COVID incidence in predominantly Black/Hispanic communities in Nassau County, L.I., was 3.5 times higher than in mostly White ones – strongly suggesting that the difference is caused by racist structures that must be dismantled if this and other health disparities are to be eliminated.

It is proposed that each participating medical student will, over four weeks, compare a pair of L.I. communities – White “versus” Black/Hispanic – to uncover specific systemic contributors to the large difference in Covid-19 incidence. An attending physician will review their findings twice-weekly, and assign a pass/fail grade after reviewing a final report on the student’s findings and recommendations.

SPEAKER: Fred Smith (physician) graduated from Wheaton College (IL) with a BA in history in 1966, and then spent one year at Yale Divinity School. After working in computer software in New York for nine years, he enrolled in SUNY Downstate Medical Center. He obtained the MD degree in 1980 and subsequently completed a three-year residency in internal medicine at the NY-VA Medical Center and NYU/Bellevue. He spent the next 20+ years as a primary care general internist in academic teaching centers – in NYC, Washington DC, and Long Island. In 2005, he changed his focus to end-of-life palliative consultation, and in 2010 to bioethics consultation and teaching. The 2011 opening of the new Zucker School of Medicine at Hofstra/Northwell in 2011 allowed him to help develop and mentor first, discussion-centered courses in bioethics and professionalism for medical students; and, later, a one-year bioethics course for community clinicians and law and medical students.

News of Members

Debra Shuger (Distinguished Professor of English, UCLA) has authored Paratexts of the English Bible, 1525-1611, forthcoming from Oxford University Press. She describes the book this way: English Bibles from Tyndale's 1525 New Testament through the 1611 King James house calendars, woodcuts, maps, chronologies, prayers, philological glosses, inset historical essays, elaborate multi-page diagrams, single-leaf summaries of scripture, prefaces by eminent churchmen, doctrinal notes by leading theologians, a dialogue on predestination, a twelfth-century genealogy of Christ, and a ninth-century Jewish chronicle—most are widely available, given the hundreds of editions printed between those dates. Her book explores this archive, but also tracks its changes, for while biblical translations remain relatively stable over time, the paratexts cocooning a Bible's first printing sometimes mutate, sometimes vanish, in succeeding editions—indeed sometimes migrate to a competing Bible. And these paratexts, together with their revelatory print histories, disclose a picture of the English Reformation, of English Reformations, that differs in striking ways from, as it were, the authorized version.

Debra is also co-editor of Documents of Anglophone Christianity, a series of high-level anthologies of primary documents (theology/sermons, but also poetry, prayers, diaries, stories, historical narratives, etc.). There are at least 5 volumes now published: Tudor era, early Stuarts, colonial American, 18th c. British, and 19th c. British.

She also reports that her home parish in Los Angeles, St. Mary in Palms, a parish of some 50 souls, recently celebrated its centenary and was honored by the presence of former Anglican Primate Rowan Williams, who graciously (and amazingly) agreed to be celebrant.

NEWSLETTER OF THE GUILD OF SCHOLARS OF THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Marsha Dutton (Professor of English Emerita, Ohio University) participated in a small invited conference on Aelred of Rievaulx on January 12—Aelred’s feast day—hosted by the British National Trust and the British Archeological Association. Her paper was titled “Embracing God in the Memory: Aelred’s Use of Augustine’s Mystical Theology for Spiritual Pedagogy.”

Marsha continues as Executive Editor of Cistercian Publications. Two of the books she has edited in the past year have just won 3rd prize in different categories in the 2021 Catholic Media Awards: Northern Lights, a collection of twelve essays from nuns in a Cistercian women’s monastery in Norway; and the English translation of Pierre-André Burton’s Aelred of Rievaulx (1110–1167): An Existential and Spiritual Biography, translated by Prof. Christopher Coski of Ohio University. In May, at the annual International Medieval Studies Conference at Western Michigan University, Marsha presented a paper titled “God’s Harvest of Myrrh and Honey: Gilbert of Hoyland’s Recollection of Aelred of Rievaulx in Sermon 40 on the Song of Songs.”

Dabney (Bud) Park (University of Miami) wrote an article titled “I’m Not Uzzah! Dante Speaks Truth to Power” that will be published in the 2021 issue of Annali d’Italianistica, which is dedicated to the 700th anniversary of Dante’s death. He has also been invited to contribute a paper titled “Rush to Judgment? The Persecution of John of Parma: His Dismissal, Trial, and Punishment” to the Festschrift in Honor of David Burr, to be published in 2022.

Chris Kaiser (Professor emeritus, Western Theological Seminary). Retirement from teaching theology has afforded me time to read up in areas like historic Judaism and to polish a few articles that I had started years ago in order to prepare them for publication. The latter include an article on the historic relation between creational theology and science: “The ‘Marks of God’s Wisdom’ in Comenius’s Panorthosia: A Biblical Commonplace at the Foundations of Modern Science,” published in Science and Christian Belief 23/2 (Oct. 2020), 144-60. Another is related to the emergence of early Christology: “YHWH Texts in the New Testament and Early Judaism: Disjunctive or Doxological?” in St. Vladimir’s Theological Quarterly 64 (2020), 27-70 (both are available at www.academia.edu).

Nick Birns reports that his Anthony Trollope: A Companion, co-edited with John Wirenius, has been released in the series McFarland Companions to 19th-century Literature. He is also co-editing the Cambridge Companion to the Australian Novel which is coming out in late 2022; and his article on the global literary reverberations of the Crimean War is forthcoming in Victorian Studies.

At NYU this year he taught courses on Dickens, Conrad, Dostoyevsky, global refugee literature, and South Asian fiction. He is serving as the President of the Church Club of the Diocese of New York and will take over as the chair of the Diocese’s Commission on Campus Ministry in late 2021.
